For the Mereury WHEN THE MOON'S RAYS FALL MY W. R. DELANY.

Fair Cynthia sails in an opal cloud. Bright with a silver lining, And round the rim of Night's blue shroud The glistening stars are twining, The molten beams that broadly spread Far on the gliding river, Fall where the sycamores loom their head, Fall where the oak-leaves quiver!

Hell to Thee, clear and lovely night, Hail to thy star-gammed brow The flashings, pearled wreaths of light You fling on the earth below ;-They fall on the flower of the heathery dell. They pierce the forest glade.

They grown the file of the limpid well

Through a vail of amovald shade!

Mayhop Titania upon thy beam Dances with elfin gles, While Oberon in a fairy dream Slambers right dulcively. And eldrith Puck in a blue-bell's cup Is coining dishlerie, Or drinking the dew he loves to sip,

And laughing serily ! Down in the waters pale and low Floats another moon. Shining where branchy sea flowers grow That are warmed by the sun at noon.

There the Namada glide, in an under tide. Or sink to their soral home. While the night rays above them thinly slide With a green and a pallid glosm ! And the moon hangs broad above the lea,

Where the tall grass shelters the flowers, And the long beams radiantly Over the graveyard showers, Resting up n a tembstone head, Lighting the oppress leaves-And falling bright where the silent dead. Are lying in garnered sheaves,

> For the Mercury. APRIL 1864

April is here, the joyous month of song ; The tiny birds, in anthems sweet and long Pour forth praises, and o'er the graves of flowers Respond, with influence mild and refreshing

Stream sunny rays invigorating and mild Upon their friendly mission sent by Phosbus

Thou art a sunny month and one of showers. Faithful precursor of the month of flowers ; Adorning her palace, preparing the way By spreading green carpets for floral Queen May That by her royal hand are to be inwrought With colors rare, of ev'ry shade and ev'ry sort, Nor wilt thou see of all the year the Queen ; For at her coming thou must needs retire, At May's golden threshold doth April expire.

> AFTER THE BALL They sat and combed their beautiful hair,

Idly they talked of waltz and quadrille; Idly they laughed, like other girls, Who over the fire, when all is still, Comb out their braids and curls.

Robe of satin, and Brussels lace. Knots of flowers and ribbons, too, Scattered about in every place,

For the revel was through. And Maude and Madge in robes of white, The prettiest night-gowns under the sun, Sit and talk in the chilly night After the revel is done.

Bit and comb their beautiful hair, Those wonderful waves of brown and go Till the fire is out in the chamber there, And the little bare feet are cold.

Then out of the gathering wintry chill, All out of the bitter St. Agnes weather, When the fire is out and the house is still,

Maud and Madge together-Maude and Madge in robes of white, The prettiest night-gowns under the sun, Curtained away from the chilly night

After the revel is done, Float along in a splendid dream To a golden gittern's tinkling tune,

Through a palace's grand saloon. Plashing of jewels, and flutter of laces. Tropical odors sweeter than musk, Men and women with beautiful faces

And eyes of tropical dusk. And one face shining out like a star, One form haunting dreams of each, One voice, sweeter than others are Breaking in silvery speech. Telling through lips of bearded bloom. An old, old story over again,

As down the royal bannered room -To the golden gittern's strain-Two and two they dreamily walk While an unseen presence walks beside

And all unheard in the lover's talk, He claimeth one for a bride. Maud and Madge sleep on together. With never a pang of jealous fear,

For ere the bitter St. Agnes weather Shall whiten another year-Robed for the bridal, and robed for the tomb, Braided brown hair, and golden tress-assured he should be led to victory. A Roman hould by his vote reduce these processings, and the guilty would be made wiser.

It was believed, two weeks ago, that no optimize the gods of the legions—the gods of the legions supreme in power. Under this detusion, it was that ancient Rome became the mistress of the world. But when the darkness of this delusion was dispelled by the light of truth, then Republican, and one Democratic, as follows: the military character of that people began to decline, and from this and other causes the great " Queen of Earth" finally fell from the summit of her dominion.

The loss of an honest superstition so favorable to the success of a conquering people, was followed by the loss of that ambition for glory and fame which had fed the zeal and courage of every grade in the military service of the State. In the purer days of the republic, nothing of the kind could exceed the imposing grandeur of a Roman Triumph. But such a spectacle could only have its greatest effect when all classes of the people united in the admiration of such scenes. As soon therefore as the peculiar character of Roman civilization began to change and higher views of human destiny began to prevail, the charm which had worked such wonders in Roman history was man general became dispirited in proportion as he was less honored as a minister of the gods.

The manners of the people gradually underwent a fatal change-that is, fatal to the Roman system of greatness, and to greatness anywhere under a similar system. The republic even contained within her own bosom the causes of final decay, and the poison of dissolution at last preyed upon her vitals. Rome became in part the victim of prosperity, $1,200. because licentiousness was left to go on unrestrained by coercion; and, in part, the victim of a general depravity which had seized upon the higher orders of the State, and which ended in the most degrading corruption of the ruling classes.
